
MONOPOLY GAME FROM THERESIENSTADT

This monopoly game was made by the graphics workshop in the Theresienstadt ghetto to inform children about ghetto life. The "Chance" cards give a glimpse into what life was like, as some of the cards tell players that they must leave the game because their name is on a transport list for the next day. Transports from Theresienstadt meant death in one of the extermination camps, usually Auschwitz-Birkenau or Treblinka.

Image ©Yad Vashem Museum

© Echoes & Reflections Partnership