

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am a full-time freelance interpreter and translator based in New York City, New York. I am a Chinese American. I was borned in Taiwan and immigrated to the United States when I was at primary school. I am Chinese by ethnicity and American by culture. I am fluent in both Chinese and English, but because of the background that I grew up in, I would feel more confident to work with English as the target language and Chinese both simplified and traditional as the source language.

I have experiences in both interpretation and translation in a diverse range of sectors, such as religion, medicine, business, legal and many others. A few of them include, but not limited to translations for religious groups seeking political asylum to the United States, worked with Christian scholars in translating their publications on Christianity, and translating the personal statements of immigrants appealing for their legal rights to stay in the United States, and etc. Thank you for reaching out to me and please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions. I look forward to speaking with you!

Thank you very much!

Best,

I No (Eleanor) Wu
