Rebecca Blunden

Editor, proofreader and writer

rebecca.exactlyediting@gmail.com

I am a native English freelance editor and proofreader, and I write creatively in my spare time. Interested in many different things, I have worked in a wide variety of roles and sectors, all of which now informs my work with words. My first love is language. Give me something to read or a person to converse with and I will be in my element - language makes the world go 'round...

Experience

March 2016 - Present

Owner Exactly Editing

Freelance editing and proofreading for a variety of international clients. I work for individuals, businesses and public organizations. My clients include NIBC Bank, Merkur Offshore, Everoze, ProPlanEn E-Cetera and DNV GL, amongst others. The main body of my work comprises business reports, technical writing, web copy, and academic books and journals. I am currently seeking to widen my expertise by taking professional courses with the SfEP (Society for Editors and Proofreaders), of which I have been a member since 2016.

Education

February 2017 - April 2017

September 2012 - April 2017

Copy-editing Headway (CE2)

The Society for Editors and Proofreaders (SfEP)

A quick but in-depth CPD course which reviewed skills I had already learned, such as how to follow a client's brief, how to identify and organize different elements of a document, and how to mark-up texts clearly and accurately, both using Microsoft Word and on paper, using the British Standard symbols. It then looked at the following in greater depth: the technicalities of copy-editing displayed matter and bibliographies, photographs and figures. Assessments covered a variety of texts, from academic books to documents available in the public domain. I found that the course refreshed my existing knowledge, whilst introducing some useful new techniques and solidifying how to use Microsoft Word effectively.

Grade: Pass

Advanced level

The Writers' Studio Amsterdam

Writers' Studio offers a series of creative writing workshops rooted in the craft of writing, which I have been following since autumn 2012. Developed by the poet, Philip Schultz, the course uses exercises based on published writers' work to develop and hone an individual's own writing, using the building blocks of tone, mood, point of view, description, action, dialogue and sense of time/place, all driven by a well-crafted narrator.

At advanced level I am finding ways to use these techniques to develop my own work further. I am currently working on some short stories and one longer narrative, for completion by the end of 2016.

Writers' Studio has given me the tools I needed to focus, persist, and eventually craft coherent tales from my germinating ideas.
